

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. CATALOGUE

The Century Association

NOTE.

THE library here catalogued was a gift from James Lorimer Graham, who by his will left his books as a memorial of his membership in and his love for the Century Association. In appreciation not merely of the gift, but of the giver, a commemorative meeting of the Association was held on January 20th, 1894, at which a biographical sketch of the donor and an account of the library were read. The proceedings of this meeting were printed, and thus make unnecessary further tribute here to either Mr. Graham or his books.

As a further recognition of Mr. Graham's generosity it was suggested to the Committee on Literature that a catalogue of the library should be printed, and with its approval the present work was undertaken. A slight examination will show that the method has been distinctly eclectic, valuable or unique books being described with very considerable fullness, while works of less rarity have been more briefly catalogued. At the same time a card catalogue of the library was prepared, which included a subject as well as an author list. In consequence neither subject references nor an index have been considered necessary in the present catalogue, the purpose being to show, by a simple author list, the books given by Mr. Graham.

Cotton Mather maintained that "unto those Three Things which the Ancients held Impossible, there should be added this Fourth, to find a Book Printed without Errata's. It seems, the Hands of Briareus, and the Eyes of Argus, will not prevent them." The present work undoubtedly contains numerous errors, but it is a pleasure to the compiler to acknowledge the correction of many by the librarian of the Association, Mr. J. H. Senter, who kindly compared the proof sheets with the books. Another debt of thanks is due to the Committee on Literature, and especially to its former Chairman, Mr. Edward Cary, whose suggestion and encouragement were a principal cause in inducing the compiler to volunteer his services.

ADAMS (John). A Defence of the Constitutions of Government of the United States of America. London: Printed for C. Dilly, in The Poultry. M.DCC.LXXXVII- 3 vols. 8vo.

 This so called "defence" of American State Constitutions was in truth a plea for Constitutional limitations and clogs on popular government, and was so undemocratic in its whole tone as later to be a most effective political argument against the author in the campaigns of 1796 and 1800.

— The Duplicate Letters, the Fisheries and the Mississippi. Documents relating to transactions at the negotiation of Ghent. Collected and published by John Quincy Adams, one of the Commissioners of the United States at that negotiation. Washington: Printed by Davis & Force, (Franklin's Head) Pennsylvania Avenue. 1822. 8vo. pp. 256.

 The negotiation at Ghent, which terminated the War of 1812, ranks among the most interesting episodes of American diplomacy. Especially difficult was the position of Adams, for the New-England attitude towards the war had been so cold as to savor of actual disloyalty. In consequence, the American commissioners, as a whole, were not over anxious to save to that locality the fisheries; and to Mr. Adams were practically due the fishery clauses finally inserted in the treaty. His efforts for that purpose are set forth in full in these letters. The whole story is brilliantly told in the third volume of Mr. Henry Adams' History of the Administration of James Madison; but these original letters are still interesting, as much because of the individuality of the writer, as because of the constant reappearance of the main question in our diplomacy.

— The Campaign: a Poem, To His Grace the Duke of Marlborough. By Mr. Addison. . . . London: Printed, and Sold by H. Hills, in Black-Fryers, near the Water-side, 1710. 8vo. pp. 16.

 The true story of the writing of this poem, which secured the author such contemporary fame, and won him his pension, can be found in any life of Addison. Yet even so modest a poet could hardly have dreamed that one day his poem, which sold a hundred thousand copies in three months, would be chiefly known by the fictitious account of its writing, purporting to be narrated by one Lieut.-Colonel Esmond, though penned by Thackeray.

 There is a noticeable tendency, of by no means modern origin, to judge much work not by the quality of the work, but by the quality of the worker. Let a woman or an infant prodigy do anything, a blind or armless man play on the piano, etc., etc., etc., and the thing done is at once declassified, and judged on new grounds. One of the fortunate individuals so favored was John Clare, and in his time he created a great stir. What the merit of his work was, time has rated more truthfully.

ANACREON, Bion, and Moschus, with other translations. By Thomas Stanley. First printed 1651. A new edition, with a preface, critical and biographical. London: From the Private Press of Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown. 1815. 12mo. pp. xxvii, (4), 276.

ANACREON. The Odes of Anacreon. Translated by Thomas Moore. With fifty-four illustrative designs by Girodet de Roussy. Now first produced in England. London: John Camden Hotten, Piccadilly. [1869.] oblong 12mo. pp. 225. pls.

[ANBUREY (Thomas)]. Voyages dans les Parties Intérieures De l'Amérique, pendant le cours de la dernière guerre; Par un Officier de l'Armée Royale. Traduit de l'Anglois. Tome premier. A Paris, Chez Briand, Libraire, rue Pavée-Saint-André-des-Arcs, no. 22. 1790. 2 vols. 8vo. pls.

* * Anburey was, or claimed to be, an officer in Burgoyne's army. His narrative is, however, so largely plagiaristic from Burgoyne's narrative, and from certain well known books of travel, that the probabilities are that the book was worked up in Grub street, without the author ever having been in this country. His account is as truthful, however, as most English travels in America.

AUTOGRAPHS. 3 vols. 4to.

* * A very valuable and interesting series of autographs, mounted and bound into volumes, chiefly of famous English people. The first volume is largely formed of authors and statesmen, while the other two are entirely theatrical. In most cases, biographical sketches, portraits, play bills, or other germane matter, accompany each letter. The whole forms a most rare and intrinsically valuable collection, the most notable being a letter from Nelson to "My Dear Emma" (Lady Hamilton), a "private" letter of Wellington's, one of Richard Cumberland, writing of his "new comedy," and three autograph poems of Thomas Moore. The following is a list of the contents, the figures in parenthesis indicating portraits:

BALLADS. [London and other places: 1790–1820.] 4to.

* * A collection of over three hundred ballads, mostly narrow quarto, mounted in a volume. In the early part of this century these leaflets had an enormous sale all over England, being sold by itinerant chapmen, who advertised their wares by singing them in succession, thus selling tune as well as words to would-be customers. The concert hall has pretty well done away with the picturesque trade, but it is still occasionally to be met with in the "East End;" and at the doors of certain variety-show places in London, it is still the vogue for the audience to purchase the songs to be sung, in order that they may join in the chorus, thus oftentimes supplying the best part of the programme. The following is a list of the ballads in this collection, many of which will be recognized as works known even to-day to greater numbers, and better loved, than many of the "best hundred books":

Richard of Taunton Dean.	Dear Mary, or, Farewell to Old England.
Whistle, My Love, and I'll Come Down.	Fairlop Fair.

 Mr. Barlow was for a self leveling of the ancient régime, and attempted to prove the advantage of his theory in this pamphlet. Though the "age of reason," neither classes nor masses paid much heed to his arguments, however cogent and logical. But Mr. Barlow was as well one of the few Americans of his time who dabbled in inventions and experiments and by this, and by his aid of Fulton, unconsciously blazed the path, which, culminating in the American railroads and steam reapers of to-day, has "leveled" the landholders of Europe more than all republican and democratic writings.

BARTOLOZZI (Francisco). Engravings by. [v. p., v. d.] 4to.

 A collection of 139 prints by this famous engraver, from paintings or designs of Cipriani, G. Reni, Rigaud, Angelica Kauffman, Guercino, Benjamin West, E. F. Burney, F. Cotes, I. H. Bendell, P. Violet, Thomas Engleheart, LaSagra Rosalba, H. Bunbury, H. Ramberg, Sir Joshua Reynolds, H. Walton, W. Hamilton, F. Wheatley, W. Harding, W. Palmer, Martin Madan, M. Cosway, Countess Spencer, Stothard, J. R. Smith, and Richard Cosway. For pure stipple engraving these have never been equalled, either in beauty or technique, and are now most eagerly sought for by collectors, making such a collection as the present almost impossible of duplication. The following is a list, as far as the knowledge of the compiler has enabled him to make it, for many of the engravings are without lettering, making their title purely hypothetical. The numbers in brackets refer to Tuer's lists, as printed in his Life of Bartolozzi, but several of the prints in this collection were apparently unknown to him, though the great authority on this subject. It is also obvious that certain of the impressions seen by Tuer were unlettered, and are here given a title, making some confusion in identi- fication with his lists. Especial pains have therefore been taken to make the following accurate, that it may be used to correct and enlarge his work :

YE BOOKE of Ye Goode Fellowes. 4to. 98 leaves.

 A volume personal to Mr. Graham, being one in which his various friends have left memorials of the pleasant hours passed with him. Among the most notable are poems by Bayard Taylor, C. P. Cranch, George H. Boker, E. C. Stedman, W. H. Huntington, Boughton, Lord Houghton, B. W. Procter (Barry Cornwall), Robert Browning, Longfellow, T. B. Read, G. P. Marsh, Frances Trollope, W. H. Hurlbut, Ouida (de la Ramée), Emerson and Swinburne; sentiments by Simonds, Booth, G. A. Sala, Worden, Sheridan, Meade, Lamartine, Charlotte Cushman, C. G. Leland, W. T. Sherman, McClellan and Grant; sketches by Hiram Powers, Holman Hunt and F. E. Church; music by Goldschmidt; and signatures of Gifford, Aldrich, Parke Godwin, Greenough, Bancroft, and Jenny Lind. The most interesting contribution, however, is the opening, or prefatory poem of R. H. Stoddard, which so charmingly describes the purpose of the volume, that it is here reprinted.

"Every book must have a name,
Meaning much or meaning little;
This of course must have the same :
Let me see,—
What shall it be ?
I have hit it, to a tittle :
(Fellow authors be not jealous,)
'Tis 'Ye Booke of ye Goode Fellowes.'

Not a man shall figure here,
(Soon you'll see a score appear,)
Be his talent what it will,
With the pencil, or the quill,
Old or young, or crude or mellow,

An he be not a good fellow !

Turn the leaves, and you will see
Such a goodly company :—
Poets, with their careless lines,
(Made beforehand every one !)
Artists, with their quaint designs,
Future pictures here begun ;
Critics, (spare me, dreadful men !)—
Masters of the Brush and Pen.
Some are famous now, and some
Will be in the years to come ;
(Poets can the future tell us,)
And all—the very best good fellows."

* * It was of these volumes that Lord Brougham wrote in the Edinburgh Review: "The poetry of this young lord belongs to a class which neither gods nor men are said to permit. Indeed we do not recollect to have seen a quantity of verse with so few deviations from that exact standard. His effusions are spread over a dull flat, and can no more get above or below the level than if they were so much stagnant water . . . We counsel him that he do, forthwith abandon poetry, and turn his talents, which are considerable, and his opportunities, which are great, to better account." And this review in turn called out the next title in which Byron certainly squared the account so begun.

* * The first edition of a poem "which established the reputation of the author as a poet." Campbell's conception of frontier life can be judged by the following lines:

Perchance, along thy river calm at noon
The happy shepherd swain had nought to do
From morn till evening's sweeter pastime grew,
Their timbrel, in the dance of forests brown
When lovely maidens pranked in flowret new;
And aye, these sunny mountains half way down
Would echo flagelet from some romantic town.
Then where of Indian hills the daylight takes
His leave, how might you the flamingo see
Disporting like a meteor on the lakes.

[COBBETT (William)]. Observations on the Emigration of Dr. Joseph Priestley: to which is added, a comprehensive story of a Farmer's Bull. [Philadelphia: 1795]. 8vo. pp. 81.

* * Cobbett was well styled "The Contentious Man." Though only a recent arrival in America, he threw himself into the party strifes of the time, and wrote the following series of pamphlets (besides others not in this collection) which would be most remarkable for their number, were they not more so for their ability as political arguments and their strength and clearness of English.

[COBBETT (William)]. Second Edition. A New Year's gift to the Democrats; or Observations on a pamphlet, entitled, "A vindication of Mr. Randolph's Resignation." By Peter Porcupine. Philadelphia: Published by Thomas Bradford, Printer, Book-Seller & Stationer. No. 8, South Front-Street. 1796. 8vo. pp. 71.

* * At the present time we recognize two great parties in the United States, which care much more for their own success than for the good of the country generally. But in the year 1795 the two great parties were openly termed the Anglican and French parties, and next to their own success, desired to drag their country into European politics as a make weight in the great struggle then in progress, whatever wreckage it might produce at home. As a result of this, officers high in the service of our government only too gladly told state secrets to the French and English Ministers, quite forgetting that they had been chosen for other purposes. Among these was Mr. Randolph, then Secretary of State. Unfortunately for him, a dispatch of the French Minister, containing some of Randolph's statements, was captured in transit by the British, who communicated it to Washington. There is little doubt that others equally high had been equally guilty, but Randolph by implication, did it in hopes of obtaining money, and far worse, was found out. He promptly resigned, and published a pamphlet, which by a misnomer he called "A Vindication," and this produced the above pamphlet.

 While still at sea, on his voyage from America, Columbus addressed a letter, narrating his discovery, to the Royal Treasurer, Sanchez. A copy of this was quickly in Rome, and was at once put forth in the form of an "Italian ottava rima" by Giuliano Dati, "one of the most popular poets of the day." The above is a fac simile of a German edition of this poem, of which a few copies were made by John Harris.

 At page 545 begins a genealogical sketch of the Graham family, with a plate of their coat of arms. From this it appears that the family is first traced to Sir David Græme, "who held a grant of land from King William the Lion." His descendant, Patrick Graham, was created a "Lord of Parliament" about 1445, and his grandson, William, was created Earl of Montrose in 1504. Fourth from him in succession was the great Earl of Montrose, later made a Marquis. The fourth Marquis was created Duke in 1707. "A second son of one of these Marquises" was Rev. John Graham, born in Edinburgh in 1694, and an emigrant to Boston in 1718, where he married Abigail, daughter of Charles Chauncey, and settled as minister at Stafford, Conn. His fourth son, Andrew, removed to Woodbury, Conn. Andrew's seventh child, Nathan B., married Jean, daughter of James Lorimer, of London, and settled in New York in 1810. His fourth child was Nathan B., the father of James Lorimer Graham, to whom belonged the library here catalogued.

 Inserted is the following poem, in the handwriting of the author :

Friend of my later years—how strange it seems
These leaves to turn—dead rose leaves of a time
When my heart dallied in imperfect rhyme—
When thought was crude—and my half boyish dreams
Of beauty struggled with too timid wing.
No wonder such a feeble book lay dead,
Or by a few kind friends alone was read.
Ah, what a fossil-flower! Yet give the thing
A corner on your shelves—no sign or test
Of what you know me now. Place it among
Your dry ferns gathered some long summer day
When life was sunshine. Though not even best
Of what I was—yet since it once was young,
And fragrant on my heart—throw it not quite away!

 Madame du Boccage published a poem in imitation of Milton, and another founded on Gesner's Death of Abel. She also translated Pope's Temple of Fame; but her principal work was "La Colombiade." It was at the house of this lady, at Paris, 1775, that Johnson was annoyed at her footman's taking the sugar in his fingers and throwing it into his coffee. "I was going," says the Doctor, "to put it aside, but hearing it was made on purpose for me, I e'en tasted Tom's fingers." She died in 1802.

* * Mesmer came to Paris in 1778 and began the practice of his pretended cure-all with so much success that by 1784 the delusion reached a point which required official interference, and the king appointed a Commission to investigate his theory. Franklin was made a member, and though prevented by illness from witnessing the tests made by his fellow-commissioners, he made a series of experiments at Passy, and signed the adverse report they made to the king.

— Correspondence with Francis Childs. 1785-1790. Fo.

 Fourteen autograph letters of Franklin, one of W. T. Franklin, two of John Jay, and one of Peter Freneau, all to Francis Childs.

 While Minister to France, Franklin continued to play at printing, by having in his home at Passy a small printing office, in which he cast type, and occasionally printed pamphlets. When he came to America in 1785, he brought the press and types with him. Childs was a protégé of Jay, and at his advice, set up a printing office in New York, shortly after the British evacuated the city. Through Jay he negotiated the purchase of this outfit of Franklin, and all but two of the letters relate to this matter. The letters have never been published, and throw interesting light on printing at that time, as well as on Franklin.

* * * "That the discovery in question was neither advantageous to America nor to Europe, is a proposition that many believe; and this author illustrates it, and renders it striking; but that it might have been, and may even yet be made useful to both, is equally creditable. The principal object of this judicious writer is to point out the manner of diminishing the evils occasioned by the discovery of the New World, and of multiplying the advantages that may result from it. The work breathes a liberal spirit, and is worthy of attention."

* * Mrs. Greenhow, who claims rank in this narrative among the aristocracy of Maryland, was a resident of Washington on the breaking out of the War of Secession. By means which she does not state she secured from certain Federal officials valuable disclosures "which information I at once communicated, with pride and pleasure, to General Beauregard." This led to a search of her house, and even of her "person," a capture of her cipher, and an incarceration in prison. On her release, she went to London, where this narrative was written.

HALL (Basil). The Midshipman; being autobiographical sketches of his own early career, from Fragments of Voyages and Travels. Boston: 1866. 24mo. pp. 414.

 Mr. Hall, whose works now slumber peacefully in that chamber to which Carlyle relegated "dry-as dust" books, was once the best hated of men on this side of the Atlantic, not because he merited that distinction, but because he disapproved of our democratic experiment and said so in no uncertain voice. Democracy thereupon lost its temper, and promptly enriched Mr. Hall, by buying his book—an American method still in vogue for discouraging foreign critics.

HOMER. Travels of Ulysses; Wherein is Related How he got from the Ciconians and Lotophagians, where his men eat Forgetfulness. Coming to the Land of the Cyclops, Polyphemus eat six of his men. Having with difficulty got from him Æolus gave him a Wind ty'd in a Leather sack. How Circe turn'd his men to Boars; and how the Lestrigon Giants eat his men like Fishes. Also what converse he had with the Ghosts in Hell; and at his return, how Scylla eat six of his men at one mouthful. How he escaped the Charming Syrens; and falling on the Suns Isle, the dreadful effects of it, &c. With many other Passages, strange and wonderful. Translated out of Greek By Mr. Hobbes of Malmsbury, Author of the Leviathan. The Second Edition. London: Printed by J. C. 1674. 24mo. pp. 102.

 Mr. Hobbes in his preface says: "Why then did I write it? Because I had nothing else to do. Why publish it? Because I thought it might take off my adversaries from shewing their folly upon my more serious writings." But in spite of the fact that the book was popular enough to go through three large editions within ten years, Mr. Pope declared the author's poetry "too mean for criticism," and Mr. Beattie said that "though called a translation of Homer, it does not even deserve the name of poem."

"New York, Oct. 11th, 1873.

My Dear Lorrie

The last time I saw you, was at the close of a day's work—bric-a-brac-ing in Paris.

I doubt whether you found anything more rare and curious than these volumes (considering the subject, its treatment, and the publication—being the only books, so far as I can learn, ever copyrighted by the defunct 'Confederate States of America.')

I know no place so fitting for them as your Library, where you will please place them and oblige

Yours ever sincerely,

LEE (Nathaniel). The / Tragedy / of / Nero, / Emperour of / Rome: / As it is Acted at the / Theatre-Royal, / by his Majesties Servants. / By Nathaniel Lee, Gent. / London, / Printed by T. R. and N. T. for James Magnus and / Richard Bentley, at the Post Office in Russel-Street / in Covent-Garden, 1675. / 4to. pp. (8), 54, (1).

 This, with the following plays, are bound up in two volumes, and in each is written the name of Constance Cary, a Virginian dame of the last century. After the second signature she has written "God bless her," and the pious request was needed, for though Mr. Lee described himself as a "Gent," and proved himself such by dedicating each play to some duke or earl, his productions were hardly such as would to-day be found in a woman's library.

The MAN OF MANNERS; or, Plebeian Polish'd. Being Plain and Familiar Rules for a Modest and Genteel Behaviour, on most of the ordinary Occasions of Life. Whereby the many Vanities, Weaknesses and Impertinences incident to Human Nature, (which expose Persons to Contempt and Ridicule) may be easily avoided. Written chiefly for the Use and Benefit of Persons of Mean Births and Education, who have unaccountably plung'd themselves into Wealth and Power. The Manner of walking the Streets and other Publick Places. The usual Salutations and Greetings, down from the Complaisant Grin and Sneer of Quality to the honest, Porterly How-d'-ye, or the more homely Civility, How fares your best Body? The Manner of a City Family's sitting at Dinner. Wholesale Traders, great Money-Jobbers and other rich Plodders, their Sentiments of Breeding and Good Manners. Common Conversation a meer Comedy. Rules recommended to Preachers for a modest and courtly Behaviour towards the Beau Monde. Scandalous Indecencies at Churches in Time of Divine Service; a Misfortune to the Church of England, that Farinelli and Senesino were not bred Protestants. Rudeness of the Cockaded Gentry to modest Tradesmen. Blazing Beaus of the Towns, indebted for every Article of their wearing Apparel, from the Crowns of their Head, to the Soles of their Feet, except the Bath Metal Buttons at their Shirt-Sleeves. The Irishman's Caution and Modesty, in refusing to look at the Corpse of his dead Countryman, on Account of his having a Stinking Breath when living. Street Hunchers, Jostlers, and Coach-Splashers taken Notice of. A notable Verbal Encounter between two Ladies that deal in Fresh Cod and Live Lobsters. With variety of other Matters, Moral, Serious and Comical. London: Printed for J. Roberts, near the Oxford-Arms in Warwick-lane; and sold by E. Withers, at the Seven Stars, against the end of Chancery-Lane in Fleet-street, and J. Jolliffe, at the Bible in St. James-Street; and the rest of the Booksellers of London and Westminster. Price One Shilling. 8vo. pp. iv, 60.

* * The following excerpts are typical:

"There is nothing more unbecoming, than to lick one's Fingers, Knife Spoon or Fork, to wipe one's Plate with Bread or one's Fingers, to drink up the Sauce or Gravy."

"Kissing, Toying, and Fooling between Men and their Wives at Table is vastly unbecoming."

"Lying, indeed, is crept into every Part of Conversation, from the meanest to the highest; in short it is grown so common, that I much wonder the Clergy and Quality don't leave it off, because it is practis'd by every Shop-keeper."

"In all our Converse we are carefully to refrain Swearing, it being a Vice into which many People fall by an Ill Habit; supposing it vainly an Elegance and great Ornament to their Discourse; and when we forbid Swearing, we intend to exclude all little and trifling Oaths with the rest."

"Ogling Fans, as well as Novels, Plays and Poems Bound and Gilt in the Form and Manner of Common-Prayer-Books, . . . ought to be restrained under severe Penalties."

 The author was a Benedictine monk, who probably lived in the early part of the fourteenth century. The first part of the work is a mere abridgment of the Bible, and the Greek and Roman periods are very briefly treated. The fabulous stories of Lear, Merlin, Vortimer and Vortigern then follow, after which, as the writer approaches the period of his own times, the narration becomes valuable, though colored by monastic views. It is, however, in this period one of the most valuable authorities known.

 This edition is unknown to all bibliographers. Both Quérard and the British Museum Catalogue make J. N. Moreau the author, but if he had anything to do with the preparation, it could only be as editor, for the work is a compilation.

 "In 1754, Virginia, alarmed at the French occupation of the valley of the Ohio, sent a young officer, with a small body of men, to dispossess the French. They stole upon the intruders by night, fired on them, and drove away those they did not kill. There can be little doubt that the intention was to precipitate a war between France and England, and it quickly produced it. The French in turn retaliated, and captured the Virginians, and as part of the prize of war, the journal of this young officer. Nations at that time went to war without justification, but were therefore doubly anxious to justify themselves; and the French prepared this volume to prove how wronged they had been, and printed as evidence thereto the journal of this young officer, charging that this night attack, when the two countries were at peace, was absolute murder. That young officer was Major Washington, or as it is printed in this French journal, 'Wasinghton,' and this French translation is the only form in which his journal exists. Perhaps an even more curious incident connected with this matter was later added during the Revolution; for when France came to our assistance in 1778, one of her reasons for declaring war against England, as printed in her Mémoire justificatif, was this so-called 'assassination' committed twenty-four years before by the Washington to whose assistance she was about to lend her aid."

Being the report of a commission of inquiry, appointed by the United States Sanitary Commission. With an appendix containing the testimony. Boston: [1864]. 8vo. pp. 86. 4 pls. Map.

* * A report of Valentine Mott, Edward Delafield, Gouverneur Morris Wilkins, Ellerslie Wallace, J. I. Clark Hare and Treadwell Walden. It contains four copies of photographs of "Union soldiers after their return from imprisonment at Belle Isle," and while the names of the committee vouch for the truthfulness of this report, yet its intention was largely political, to excite feeling against the South. It is, therefore, biased to the extent of dealing chiefly with the most shocking cases of brutality or physical wreckage the committee could find, and passes over without reference the thousands of Union prisoners who bore Southern imprisonment and returned in good health.

PIERS PLOUGHMAN. The Vision and Creed of Piers Ploughman. Edited, from a contemporary manuscript, with a historical introduction, notes, and a glossary, by Thomas Wright. Second and revised edition. London: 1856. 12mo.

* * Piers Ploughman is ascribed to a monkish pen, and with some authority to Robert Langland, of Shropshire. It is an allegory chiefly aimed at the political and religious corruptions of the fourteenth century, and in its time achieved as great a popularity with the common people as did Bunyan's later prototype. Its chief interest to-day is due to the fine old Anglo-Saxon form, now best known in Chaucer; but unlike that poet the author has not adopted the poetic form, introduced by the Normans into England, of making the concluding words of lines rhyme, but retains the older poetic form of the northern nations, of a very regular alliteration, the rhythmic form being obtained by two rises and two falls in the voice, indicated by the alliterative words.

"My dear Graham,—I owe it to your kindness that the mechanical labor of putting this book into words has been so greatly reduced as almost to become a pleasure. Hence you were much in my thoughts while I wrote, and I do not ask your permission to associate your name with the completed work."

 In this copy is a MS. poem in the handwriting of the author, as follows:

To Jas. Lorimer Graham, Jr.

Why unto you this book is dedicate,
Dear friend, is in my words but half expressed,
Because I am not one of those who prate
Of guarded sanctities of brain or breast:
That which I tell the world has lightest weight—
Your conscious heart will whisper you the rest.
Your friend ever,
Bayard Taylor.

WENDOVER (Roger, Monk of). Roger of Wendover's Flowers of History. Comprising the history of England from the descent of the Saxons to A. D. 1235. Formerly ascribed to Matthew Paris. Translated from the Latin, by J. A. Giles. London: M. DCCC. XLIX. 2 vols. 12mo.

 An abridged history of the world, to 1235. The first portion is absolutely valueless. The second, beginning with 447 and extending to the year 1200, is of great value, a large part of the material from which the author drew his statements having perished. For the period of about fifty years preceding 1235, the author was practically writing a history of his own times. The earlier part (to 447) is not printed in this edition. It is now believed that the work previous to 1189 was written by John de Cella.
